

Forest Legacy Foundation raises another $50,000 for the Literacy Community

The Vancouver Sun Editor-in-Chief Harold Munro (on the left in green shirt) accepts a $50,000 donation raised by the Forest Legacy Foundation at their 10th Annual West Coast Pulp Golf Tournament. The money will go towards family and children's literacy programs funded by The Vancouver Sun Raise-a-Reader campaign. Included in the presentation are the organizers of the Golf Tournament, from L to R: Laurie Kravski, Peter Fraser, Peter Rolvink, Sean Curran, Paul Prefontaine and Terry Prefontaine.

This annual golf tournament is generously supported by various forest products companies, international pulp agencies, global transportation companies, business services and industry analysts. Participants attend from around the globe. Since 2005, they have raised over $550,000 for the literacy community. The Forest Legacy Foundation is the single largest fundraiser for The Vancouver Sun Raise-a-Reader in the BC region.
